² SoFi Bank charges a flat 1% transaction fee on all crypto buy and sell orders. When you place an order, the displayed price includes this 1% fee and reflects the best available quotes from SoFi Bank's network of liquidity providers. The final execution price may differ slightly (typically within 0.10%) due to market movements between order placement and execution, as well as factors such as market depth and liquidity, asset type, and order size and type. This difference, referred to as the spread, is not part of the 1% fee. SoFi Bank may retain this spread, which reflects changes in market pricing and facilitates more immediate order execution.

³ SoFi Bank does not charge a fee to receive crypto deposits. However, crypto deposits are blockchain transactions, meaning that the sender generally must pay a network fee for the transaction to be confirmed by the blockchain network. The amount of the network fee varies based on factors including but not limited to the network and cryptocurrency used, network activity levels, and the method or type of on-chain transaction used. SoFi Bank is not responsible for paying the network fee for a crypto deposit.
